

Abstract

The circuit has a power stage (LE) with heat generating components mounted around at least one component that generates less heat mounted in an inner 5 region. The heat generating components are connected to at least one conducting metal body (K1) that is mounted on a cooling body (KK) in electrically insulated manner to cool the components. The cooling body encloses the inner region.